

Joe Throneberry, a proud native of Kingman, AZ, has carved a unique and inspiring path in his life that combines a rich tapestry of experiences, achievements, and unwavering dedication to both service and community.

Joe's journey began with a bold decision to test out of high school at the tender age of 16, showing an early glimpse of his determination and independence. He enrolled in community college, where he embarked on a journey of self-improvement, specializing in business classes that would serve as the foundation for his future success.

At the age of 17, Joe made a profound commitment to his country by joining the U.S. Army. Over the course of six years, he displayed remarkable dedication and received an honorable discharge, accompanied by several prestigious awards for meritorious service, exemplifying his exceptional service to the nation.

Transitioning into civilian life, Joe spent six years in casino management, honing his leadership and management skills. However, it was his transition into the world of business-to-business sales that truly defined his professional journey. With an impressive 25 years of experience in this competitive field, Joe established himself as a seasoned professional and an expert in his domain.

Joe's dedication extends beyond his professional career into the realm of community service. For five years, he selflessly volunteered with the Kingman Veteran's Treatment Court as the Mentor Coordinator. His unwavering commitment and contributions to veterans' well-being were recognized with induction into the Kingman Veteran's Treatment Court Hall of Fame for Resources, a well-deserved accolade.

In 2015, Joe joined the Mohave/La Paz Workforce Development Board, where he dedicated a total of seven years to the cause, five of which were served as the Chairman. His leadership and commitment to workforce development and community betterment made a profound impact in the region.

Joe's current role as the Business Services Coordinator for ARIZONA@WORK has further solidified his reputation as a dedicated professional. In this integral role, he excels in connecting employer needs with training and work-based learning opportunities for the local workforce. Moreover, he has extended his services to encompass at-risk populations and the most remote rural areas within the two counties, underscoring his commitment to community inclusivity and well-being.

In addition to his professional accomplishments, Joe has garnered recognition for his contributions. He received the esteemed "Employee of the Month" accolade from the Mohave County Community Services Department, reflecting his exemplary dedication to his work. Furthermore, Joe's outstanding contributions have led to his nomination for the Andy Devine Awards Citizen of the Year, a testament to his impact on the community.

Beyond his professional and community service, Joe also dedicates his time to the Kingsmen of Route 66 Association, where he passionately upholds the western heritage of the region. Through this association, he actively supports charitable causes, including teen scholarships and animal rescue efforts, giving back to the community in numerous meaningful ways.

In sum, Joe Throneberry's life journey is a testament to his enduring commitment to excellence, service, and community, and he continues to be a driving force in positively shaping the lives of those he serves.
