

The college shall establish standards for the consumption of food and beverages in classrooms.

Food and Beverages in Classrooms

Unless, as provided below, instructors elect to take the responsibility for making an exception, only bottled water may be consumed in the classrooms and laboratories of the college.

Because there are wide differences in the length, meeting times, and other circumstances related to college classes, instructors have the authority to make exceptions to the above policy under certain conditions:

- No exceptions can be made for classes held in classrooms equipped with student computers or for classes held in science laboratories or shops.
- If an instructor chooses to allow food and drink to be consumed in the classroom, the instructor must assume the responsibility of assuring that all waste is disposed of properly and that the classroom is left in a clean and orderly condition.
