As we wait to hear the final election results, I want to take this time to remind our MCC family (i.e., students, staff, and faculty) of the resources available on the MCC Library Vote 2020! web page. This valuable page has information to help individuals process their feelings and reflect on the possible outcomes of the election results. MCC Librarians and Deans of Student and Community Engagement have provided a myriad of resources on voting information, a digital graffiti wall, services to manage election stress along with other vital information on voting.

Our elections are a reminder of our civic duty to exercise our right to vote. This year's elections had a record turnout of registered voters, which should be celebrated. The opportunity to engage in our democracy and help shape the future of our country is a right of which we should be proud.

While we wait as a community, I encourage you to reflect on our values: Create the Future, Engage Fearlessly, Build Together, and Live Authentically. First, did you participate in creating the future? Second, how will you engage fearlessly as we wait? Third, when it's time, how will you help build together? And finally, how will you continue to live authentically given the official results?

We lived a challenging year and this year's election is no different. This is a time for unity as we continue to move through a difficult, but optimal time. It remains important to practice patience for ourselves, our students, and our community. Now more than ever, finding common ground in our conversations and being mindful of each other also remains vital.

I want to acknowledge our students, staff, and faculty members who took time off to serve as poll workers despite the current pandemic. This year our nation faced a shortage of poll workers due to the pandemic. Our elections are made possible because of these workers and currently, many of them are working diligently to count every single vote allowing for every voice to be heard.

I greatly appreciate the work we do together. Our students are outstanding and seek to better their lives through the educational opportunities offered at MCC. Our faculty and staff offer high level support and learning opportunities. I have no doubt the future of MCC will be strong, and together, we can continue to support one another to help the country heal, reflect, and grow as a nation.

Sincerely,

Dr. Stacy Klippenstein
President
